How Do You Find The Right One?

As most people know the financial, economic and investment world has changed dramatically over the last several years. Of course, that is expected to continue into the future. All of these changes have caused questions, concerns and uncertainties for many people. And when you add to that the complexities of retirement planning these days, things can get very difficult, confusing and overwhelming. So, more and more people today are desperately looking for the proper professional help in order to protect, grow and save their retirement. However, when you are looking for help or a possible change in your current help, how do you find the right advisor for your specific situation?

Well, this is a very important question. Choosing a financial advisor may be one of the most important financial decisions that you will ever make. The person you decide to work with will be in a position to influence and give you advice about critical investment, tax and planning decisions. And the quality of his or her advice could weigh heavily on your long-term financial success. So, having the proper advisor relationship in place is vital.

There are several areas to consider when evaluating financial professionals, and there are some vital and critical questions that you should ask all potential advisors during your interview process. Join me this weekend on The Retirement Money Matters Show as we address these areas and share with you these vital and critical questions. We will also let you know how to determine when it may be time to fire an advisor. The show airs on Sunday morning at 8:00 on WWKI (100.5 FM) or anytime online at www.theretirementmoneymattersshow.com.
