It Is Back-To-School Time for Your Retirement Plan

T. BRIAN HAYES

It is August, and that means it's back-to-school time. However, back-to-school time is not just for kids in school anymore. There are so many changes in the financial and economic arena each and every year. And in order to keep your retirement plan updated, accurate, and maximized at all times, you simply have to make sure you go 'back to school' to stay educated and informed. So it is back-to-school time for your retirement plan.

Summertime is usually considered break time for most students. This gives people and families the opportunity to spend more time together to do some activities and take some road trips. During this time period, it is very easy to get behind and forget about your retirement plan for a while. However, as you know, time does not stop and changes in the financial and economic arena happen all the time.

Every year there are tax law changes, interest rate changes, changes in the economy, and changes in the financial markets. With that being said, retirement planning never ends. In fact, there have been many changes this year in rules, laws, taxes and regulations. You need to be knowledgeable about all these changes, so you can make the proper, strategic adjustments to your retirement plan every year to keep your planning up to date, accurate and in line with your specific goals, objectives, and desires.So, back to school is not just for kids anymore because it is back-to-school time for your retirement plan.
